GEN. HUERTA IS MISUNDERSTOOD, INSISTS SR. GIL

student of European affairs and conversant fluently in the six major languages of Europe.

"I am delighted with Honolulu," said Dr. Gil. "This is the nicest place I have ever been in. Such a place to study, such interesting conditions, and such friendly feeling between the races."

With enthusiasm the newly-arrived consul tells of his first impressions of the Paradise of the Pacific. He has made several official visits and speaks most highly of the courteous treatment given him by all his new friends in Honolulu. Particularly interesting, he says, is the work of the hospitals where Spanish residents have received kind care.

Will Report on Conditions.
The first reports to his home government will be of the condition of the Spanish people on the islands. The consul is at present staying in the Royal Hawaiian but will move to the Spanish consulate soon. The system of Spanish promotion from consul to ambassadorship demands that he keep up a constant study of international affairs.

When Consul Gil sailed from Spain March 25 on the steamer Antonio Lopez he was agreeably surprised to find his old friend, General Huerta, aboard, bound for New York on family business. The Mexican revolution crushed one of the kindest men ever active in public affairs, he says in answer to the world's condemnation of Gen. Huerta's career in Mexico.

"A Kind Man."

"Huerta? Why, he wouldn't kill a fly. He is the kindest man I have ever met. Since taking his home in Barcelona he has given freely to charity. Although of pure Indian blood he is one of the most honored men in Spain today. His two daughters have married wealthy Spanish nobles and he is content to live the rest of his life in Spain where he can be happy. His wonderful powers of conversation have drawn around him a circle of warm friends. His only hobby in his quiet life is to play dominoes."

"Yes, Senor Gil," came the question, "but what about the accusation that Huerta caused the murder of Francisco Madero?"

"That is another misunderstood incident," replied the consul. "Madero killed a colonel, which excited so much hostility among the immediate attaches of Huerta that the act was committed without Huerta's sanction. Gen. Blanquet, son-in-law to Huerta, was politically ambitious, but Huerta was not. Whatever power Huerta acquired in Mexico it was only with the hope of seeing his government in the hands of strong leaders. He, personally, never aspired to the presidency."

Dr. Gil says also that Huerta is "ingeniero topografo," which is to say the best topographer on Mexico. He knows every mountain and valley in the troubled country. He tells of Huerta's relief fund for the famine in Spain and also of a voluntary fund for wrecked seamen which the deposed Mexican leader started while aboard ship.

Huerta Not Going to Mexico.

Concerning Huerta's mission to America Senor Gil would only say that he did not intend to go back to Mexico. The efforts of Gen. Villa to prevent such a move were unnecessary. He is accompanied by Abraham Z. Ratner, millionaire importer of Mexico. Huerta has many friends in New York and Washington.

"Huerta has not the 'intereses creados' or business influence in America that Villa and Carranza have because he refused to float paper money," explained Dr. Gil. "Both the revolutionary leaders now have issued paper money through different American banks who are willing to take chances on the success of one party or the other. This Huerta would never do."

The condition of Spain the consul claims to be good. "Spanish currency has taken a jump since the beginning of the war. Dr. Gil found that where previously to the war it required 5.18 pesetas to equal an American dollar, he was able to exchange 5.15 pesetas for the American coin in New York. Likewise the franc is now equivalent to .96 pesetas where it formerly exchanged for 1.4 in the Spanish unit. The English pound exchanges for 24.60 pesetas instead of the previous rate of 26.20, or a drop in valuation of 12 cents per pound. All this, says the consul, means that Spanish gold exchanges without premium.

DESPERADO IN SHINGLE HOME IS CONQUERED

gled, neither appearing to gain an advantage in the battle.

Then the burglar pulled himself free, stepped back and prepared to make another lunge. Shingle drew off and leveled the shotgun at the Porto Rican. He called to him to halt. The command was disregarded. As the burglar prepared to close, Shingle fired, the shot penetrating the man's groin.

Rivera dropped to the floor. He soon regained his feet. Sayers saw the Porto Rican attempt to use his knife and to reach into his pocket for another weapon. Sayers floored the desperate man. He was then carried into the yard, while Deputy Sheriff Asch and other police officers were summoned.

Rivera had a black leather handbag belonging to Mrs. Shingle thrown across his arm, and wore Shingle's gold watch in his coat when captured.

An hour before he is alleged to have entered the store of Ho Fat, a Chinese on Wilder avenue, where he rifled the cash drawer of $5 in change and took a new electric flash light, which he used in burglarizing the Shingle home.

The leather purse of Mr. Shingle, said to have contained about $20 in gold, was found on Rivera. It was empty.

The Porto Rican had visited the ice-box before going through the rooms.

The Chinese storekeeper reported to the police today that early this morning he found two sacks filled with tinned provisions and other merchandise from his premises dumped in a gutter.

Rivera had been paroled by High Sheriff Jarrett last December. He had reported each month. Sheriff Jarrett said today Rivera had been temporarily employed as yardman at residences in Puunui and Makiki. Later he had worked along the waterfront. He was last convicted of burglary in April, 1911, when found guilty of entering the premises of Paymaster Stevens on Lunallilo street, taking a watch and other articles. He is now believed to be the same man who recently burglarized the McNerny and Harry von Holt premises.

After Rivera's recovery he will be returned to Oahu penitentiary to complete serving his 20-year sentence on a former conviction.

The Bevan Grand Opera artists scored once again last night in the rendition of Verdi's "La Traviata" at the Bijou theater last night. All of the song-birds are wearing well in their voices showing improvement all through their engagement, while the augmented orchestra has been rounded into fine shape by Chev. Luigi di Rocca. The present season of grand opera at popular prices is a decided improvement and, as the season is rapidly drawing to a close, those who have failed to take advantage of the opportunity offered to hear the old favorites are advised to hear this organization once at least.

One of the favorites of favorites, "Faust," will be the offering of the Bevan company tonight. Giovacchini has appeared in this role in all of the great music centers of Europe and America and has met the highest praise upon each appearance. His rendition of this big part in "Faust" should prove a musical treat to Honolulu.

The cast includes:
Faust Sr. Sacchetti
Mefistofele Sr. Giovacchini
Margherita Mme. Vergeri
Valentino Sr. Puccini
Siebel Mme. Holmes
Marta Mme. Silva
Vagner Sr. Rubin

A special "school" performance of "Rigoletto" has been arranged for tomorrow night, when prices of one dollar, fifty and twenty-five cents will prevail. This performance is the result of the expressed desire on the part of a number of teachers in the schools and colleges of Honolulu that their students be given an opportunity to enjoy an evening of grand opera at prices a trifle better than ordinary. Tickets are now on sale for this performance and an effort is being made by the management of the Bijou to accommodate the pupils of the various schools in blocks of seats located together. It is anticipated that the youngsters will well all the Bijou for this offering.

Police Officer Edward Rose, in arresting Rivera and bringing him into town, had a close call from a wound by a razor, which the Porto Rican is said to have attempted to remove from an inside pocket.
